With a changing scenario, women have started actively participating in all behavior such as education, politics, media, science, technology, etc. More than 50% of women's contribution is in form of unpaid economic activities. The increasing level of education and awareness makes women more independent in taking the economic decision.

Education, the only key must therefore make efforts for imparting knowledge, learning, and mastering modern skills and methods than merely storing and distributing the traditional ones.

To fulfill this purpose of training of mind and mastering skills and harnessing science, commerce, humanities, and technology as well as profitable and productive processes of economic growth and social well-being, the technological and competition-based education system has to be continuously reviewed and adopted.
